This is the case with the Second avenue, Sixth avenue, Eighth avenue, Grand street, Fourteenth street and Twenty-third street cross-town lines, the Boulevard cars and the Belt line. Every morning and evening the cars on those lines are packed to their utmost limit, and whenever passengers who have secured places inside the car are to be let off, a stop of several minutes must be made while the front or rear platform, whichever the case may be, empties itself, and finally, when the passenger emerges from the crush, he must regard himself as lucky if his clothing has not been forn from his black.

Children's Chairs.

Children would be better, happier, healthier and of finer physique if parents devoted a part of the household furniture to their exclusive use and personal convenience. It is not enough to give Mr. Little Boy, as the Japanese say so politely, a high chair or the unabridged dictionary at the dining-table, He has his books, picture cards, paints, and playthings, somebody should see that he is provided with a centre table, whose centre of gravity and point of support coincide, and a side chair or armchair with a flat back. Weak backs, crooked backs, round shoulders, nerves and so-called naughtiness are caused by bad partitions, hanging legs, flying feet unsuitable chairs. The child's feet belong on the floor. High chairs are bad, and spindle-back furniture is unomfortable.

Light Grapes for Preserves. A young matron was much disconerted last Fall by the mistake of he susband, whom she had directed to send her a crate of grapes for preserving When they came they proved to be one of the light varieties. She supposed they would be good for nothing, excep to eat au naturel, but when they had been nearly consumed, took the notion of trying an experiment with them. That experiment proved so great an improvement on the darker sorts of grapes that this year she is prepared to invest
